

WHAT: Colletta is a modern Italian restaurant and one of The Indigo Road's latest endeavors in Atlanta. Led by executive chef Michael Perez, Colletta, meaning collection in Italian, presents new interpretations of Italian cuisine using fresh and locally-sourced ingredients. Surrounded by white brick, butcher tables, and an open kitchen, diners may order a la carte or family style. Colletta offers updated classic Italian cocktails and expertly selected wines. Colletta is located in Avalon, Alpharetta, GA's premier lifestyle destination.

CUISINE: Colletta's cuisine draws influence largely from Northern Italy and reflects Chef Michael Perez's novel interpretations of Italian food. Gaining inspiration from a trip to Florence in summer 2014, Perez combines familiar flavors with unexpected ingredients, offering something everyone. Following Italian dining traditions, Colletta's "For The Table" menu offers options for a communal, family style dining experience. A full menu is also available a la carte.

SPACE: Designed by David Thompson Architect, Colletta is centered around its kitchen with its wood burning oven front and center. Boasting a total of 4,600-square-foot, reclaimed barn wood, timber and wood tiles are juxtaposed with refined ceramic tile. A four foot signature metal dome light fixture hangs over a white marble wait station, creating a focal point in the room. The space seats 130 guests, including the 11-seat chefs counter overlooking the kitchen and pasta station. Colletta's bar also opens to the restaurant's courtyard, with an added service window to serve cocktails to guests strolling in Avalon. Additional features include a patio that seats 50 guests and a semi-private dining space accommodating up to 24.

DETAILS: Reservations not required, but encouraged. All major credit cards are accepted.
